

County to apply for dredging funds

Des News 4-5-84

PROVO — An emergency resolution was passed by Utah County commissioners Monday to apply for $1 million from the Disaster Relief Board for engineering and design work on the proposed Jordan River dredging project.

The commissioners added a special section stating they have no more money to contribute to the project. The resolution will include Salt Lake County when it is presented to the board.

Utah County has been working with Salt Lake County for months to get the Jordan River dredged. Dredging would allow more water to flow from Utah Lake into the river, and flooding along both the lake and river would be lessened.

Utah and Salt Lake counties are asking the state Legislature for $10 million to dredge the river.

The Army Corps of Engineers was scheduled to do the project, but backed out when Salt Lake County could not get the cooperation of water users in their county.

Utah County Commissioner Gary Anderson said water users are the ones who are going to benefit, and they should help pay.

"I still think the water users need to be involved," Anderson said. "It still bothers me that we had the Army Corps all ready to go on this and the entire project was stopped."

Both counties have already spent $500,000 in preliminary work.

ment so lethargic and that real action will y when one of two things a crisis must occur or a ts citizen coalition must o force changes, he said.

y is in Salt Lake City to ches and attend general e of The Church of Jesus Latter-day Saints. He dnesday evening at West-College.

Deseret News interview said citizen involvement problems before a crisis But, he said, a crisis is inevitable if the country on its present course.

ernment's inability to deal with serious problems. "The fundamental cause of endless, ever-mounting deficits, has been and is excessive spending and the inability of Congress or successive presidents to cut the spending and balance the budget."

The primary cause of this repeated failure, he said, is the political power of special interests and the absence of an organized public interest political support that both Congress and the White House need to overcome the special interests.
"Such support does not and cannot come from the partisan process."

The leadership the nation needs

See ROMNEY on B-10

PH

George Romney says deficit is nation's